Massy Creck Col ege.

Mossy Creek, Tenn., May 31, MR. EDITOR: A ramble through the college building to-day, revealed the fact that some valuable work has been done by the two literary societies curing the year, in the way of building up the libraries and equiping their halls. The members of the Columbian society have erected a large and very commodious book-oase in their hall, which, by untiring efforts, they have fieled to its utmost capacity with valuable within the reach of all, it has saved more books. They have also added some orna. lives and relieved more suffering, externally mental works and otherwise improved and internally, than any other medicine. their hall. Knock both heads out of a flour or other barrel, and set it on the surface of the bed, in the center of the circle. Fill this barrel with the richest stable manure. The bed is now ready. On the outside of the barrel, on three sides next the sun, about the time of planting Indian corn plant a dozen cucumber seeds, making three hills, the north side being reserved for a footpath to the barrel. As soon as the plants are secure against the striped bug or other contingency, and have about three leaves, thin them to two or three in a hill being six or nine in all. As the plants need water, pour a few bucketsful into the barrel every day or two, and the vines are prepared till frost for the most fruitful growth. As soon Special rates on application for advertiseas they are ready to run, being well weeded up to that time, place a light layer of brush over the whole bed to guard against chickens and dogs, and to form a support for the vines and fruit. In cutting the fruit use care to avoid treading on the other advertisements payable on demand after first vines and cut the stems with a sharp knife. These intended to be cut for pickles should be cut with stems left on the cucumbers. I have cut, by count, rorty-two cucumbers an inch or two long for pickles in a single day. It is best to cultivate and handle all tender vines in the late evening so as to give a whole night for recovery before the sun scorches them. Persons raising cucumbers this way once will never try the old method again. While the strip d cug attacks the cucumber most vigorously, when planted in the old way, the manure seems to be an entire preventive of their presence, at least, I have never seen one in the vines raised this
